WORKSHOP SESSIONS

Right/Left/Whole Brain Thinking (Part I-II)

This in vogue topic is one for all educators to be knowledgeable about. We will discuss some of the background on this topic, as well as its application to the classroom. This topic is one that is affecting education in a dynamic way today.

Methods of Assessment, Evaluation and Grading in the Christian School

This seminar will involve the teachers in determining what are the best types of evaluations for their students. All areas of grading, assessment and evaluation will be studied as well as rubrics developed for specific subject areas.

Curriculum: Lesson Planning Made Easy

This seminar will help the teacher learn how to develop lesson plans that flow from objectives and goals from the mission of the school rather than just rewriting the published curriculum plans. This seminar will attempt to show how the textbook can be a "springboard" to real teaching through using this proposed lesson plan format. Several lesson planning formats will be presented and critiqued as well as important aspects to write in each lesson plan.

Biblical Integration: An Example from an International School in South America.

Biblical integration is something we value but often stumble implementing. The strategy of Biblical Integration from the Pan American Christian Academy will be shared. Might this strategy work in your school?

The Best of Both Worlds: Educating Students who are Christians with Global and Local Values

Global Education is a priority among educational leaders. Can we accept the challenge of pursuing the best of both worlds – Global excellence and the values we agree are needed for this world to survive, and excellence at the local and personal level so that the character of our students is something we can be proud of right here at home? We will discuss the challenges facing us in Christian schools.

Early Education Principles & Practices: Understanding the Value of Developing Relationships

Through this session, we will learn to acknowledge the different perspectives of our fellow teachers and our parents, and be reminded of the ethical implications of working in an early education center.

And to help us develop relationships with teachers and parents alike, it is good to review some communication techniques that we might need to employ as we interact with them.

Early Education Principles & Practices: Understanding the Importance of Personal Growth & Call to Excellence

This session will help identify the teacher's personal developmental stage as she gains a clear understanding of the value of continuing growth, both personally and professionally, by discovering his/her own uniqueness, accepting individual strengths and limitations, and by setting and evaluating professional goals that leads to growth.

Early Education Principles & Practices: Understanding the Teacher as Facilitator

Expected competencies... Age-appropriate experiences... Hands-on activities...

Biblical integration...How do I put all these together in a systematic manner without sacrificing the fun and balance of learning activities in the different content areas? In this workshop, essential templates to aid curriculum-making will be presented to ensure that the key components of planning are all accounted for.

Early Education Principles & Practices: Understanding the Influence of the Classroom Environment

When we talk of best pedagogical practices, the learning environment cannot be taken for granted. Yet, who isn't faced with the reality of limited space, limited budget or limited ideas? Small changes can be made within the classroom to produce large results. Learn how to make the most of what you have and be ready to share your ideas, too.

A Framework for a Biblically-Based Good Christian Education

Good education provides academic superiority and high morale to each child who is valued as an individual person, with a need to grow and develop both academically and spiritually. Good education must always develop a “man for all seasons, so he can effectively face the challenges inherent in a dynamic world such ours.

But what ingredients truly make up for a good education in the various disciplines that include the natural, social, and behavioural sciences?,(i.e. science, math, languages, arts, social studies, among others).

To discover these ingredients for a good education, answers to questions posed here will be the objects of discussion in this session.

3600 Seconds Teaching Odyssey

If there is a desire that a good teacher/administrator should have, that would be the “success of their students”!

“3600 Seconds Teaching Odyssey”, is session that will show how we can achieve this aim. It shares tried, actual teaching-learning methods that communicate principles, facts, knowledge, skills, and develop desirable attitudes among the learners, while making teaching and learning a fun experience.
